RefWorks, what is your experience?

If you’re just learning it now, you’ll want to assess how quickly you think you can become adequately proficient and either choose not to use it or use only very basic features.
What is RefWorks?

- Personal database of citations
- Allows you to create a collection of citations organized into folders, accessible for future.
- You can draw on all of these sources when you start writing a lit review
- You can manipulate these citations in any way you want, create bibliographies, add personal notes to the citations, attach the full text articles, and you can share folders with colleagues.
RefWorks – Benefits

• RefWorks is supported by UNT--you can contact UNT staff/librarians for help--or contact Refworks support directly.
• Access is ongoing as long as UNT continues to subscribe
• You can maintain a database of your resources for future work/writing.
• You can organize your citations by subject, in folders
• You can search within your database of citations
• You can easily create bibliographies with RefWorks
• RefWorks Write-N-Cite allows you to also easily create in-text citations
